

the 1990s, the number of people in the UK who are employed in the public sector has increased by 1.5 million (from 2.5 million in 1980 to 4 million in 1999). The public sector has also become an important employer of people with disabilities. In 1999, 1.2 million people with disabilities were employed in the public sector, compared with 0.8 million in 1980. This increase has been driven by a number of factors, including the growth of the public sector, the increasing awareness of the needs of people with disabilities, and the increasing demand for services from people with disabilities.

The public sector has also become an important employer of people with disabilities in the UK. In 1999, 1.2 million people with disabilities were employed in the public sector, compared with 0.8 million in 1980. This increase has been driven by a number of factors, including the growth of the public sector, the increasing awareness of the needs of people with disabilities, and the increasing demand for services from people with disabilities.

The public sector has also become an important employer of people with disabilities in the UK. In 1999, 1.2 million people with disabilities were employed in the public sector, compared with 0.8 million in 1980. This increase has been driven by a number of factors, including the growth of the public sector, the increasing awareness of the needs of people with disabilities, and the increasing demand for services from people with disabilities.

The public sector has also become an important employer of people with disabilities in the UK. In 1999, 1.2 million people with disabilities were employed in the public sector, compared with 0.8 million in 1980. This increase has been driven by a number of factors, including the growth of the public sector, the increasing awareness of the needs of people with disabilities, and the increasing demand for services from people with disabilities.

The public sector has also become an important employer of people with disabilities in the UK. In 1999, 1.2 million people with disabilities were employed in the public sector, compared with 0.8 million in 1980. This increase has been driven by a number of factors, including the growth of the public sector, the increasing awareness of the needs of people with disabilities, and the increasing demand for services from people with disabilities.

The public sector has also become an important employer of people with disabilities in the UK. In 1999, 1.2 million people with disabilities were employed in the public sector, compared with 0.8 million in 1980. This increase has been driven by a number of factors, including the growth of the public sector, the increasing awareness of the needs of people with disabilities, and the increasing demand for services from people with disabilities.